BERLIN, Germany, June 23.—Lemberg has fallen. The Galician capital has been conquered by the Austro-German forces who for two months have been sweeping through the region, steadily driving back into their own territory the Slav hordes who invaded Galicia and tried to overrun Hungary.

Lemberg was occupied by the Russians on September 2. Since the Teutonic Allies took Przemyśl, Lemberg has been the objective of a series of fierce concentrated attacks.

The success of these attacks will have a far-reaching political effect, as the driving of the Russians out of Galicia is counted upon in Berlin to help maintain the status quo of the Balkans and deter Rumania and Bulgaria from joining the Allies.

The following cablegram from official German sources was received today:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.—Austro-Hungarian headquarters report that the second army has conquered Lemberg after a violent fight."
